

LURED HIS VICTIMS BY PLEDGE TO WED

Two Young Women Accuse Man Already Married, Who Is Indicted as Slaver.

ONE LIVED IN HIS HOME

Kugelmann, Also in Tombs as Trafficker in Women, Held in Heavy Jail.

On the strength of stories told by two young women to the Grand Jury in the state court investigation three indictments were returned yesterday against Kugelmann, of 325 West Ninety-third street. It is alleged that Kugelmann, posing as a man of means, has lured to work for him after diverting them from the straight road by promises of marriage.

He had his wife and seven-year-old son in the Ninety-sixth street apartment, where Helen Keives, one of the grand jury witnesses, also lived. Mrs. Kugelmann is under arrest charged with interfering with an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, who was sent to her home to take the boy away. Helen Keives, breaking away from a district attorney's detective at Ninety-sixth street and running toward the street, jumped down a flight of thirty steps and was running toward the river when the detective caught her, she said she was afraid the authorities would put her in jail, but was reassured by the information that she was wanted only as a material witness.

Milliner Second Accuser.

The other witness was Pauline Mink, who Kugelmann lured her astray, but she refused to have anything to do with other men and Kugelmann considered himself with taking the money she saved as a milliner.

Helen Keives told Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith that her parents brought her to America from Russia when she was 7 years old and that she came to New York from Chicago two and a half years ago and worked behind the counter in a 12th street cafe where Kugelmann was steadily. Her hours were from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M., her pay $6 a week. She had met him about a month, she said, when Kugelmann, following her one night to the door of her home in 115th street, asked her why she should work so hard. "I know where there's some easy money," she said. Kugelmann told her, "Come, take a walk with me." They walked until 3 A. M. The next day he reappeared and remarked that her clothes were not becoming. He went away, she said, and returned the next day, according to her story, Kugelmann told her to go out and earn money.

Took Her Wages as Servant.

Helen Keives said that from April 1 to August 25 of this year she averaged 12 a day, and that when she tried to get something for herself Kugelmann told her to go to work. She said she was lured out and after beating her he pocketed the little money. After his arrest, which occurred August 29, Kugelmann told her a message telling her to leave the city at once. She had no money, but one of her patrons said he would help her. She was waiting for him on a high up Riverside Drive when the detective appeared.

Mr. Smith asked her why she didn't run away from Kugelmann. "I did," she replied. "But he found me and told me, 'I have always wanted to be respectable. Why, for ten months I worked in a good place as a servant and got $25 a month. Kugelmann took that money from me.'"

He Hid in Her Home.

Pauline Mink says her parents are in Russia and she was brought here by relatives ten years ago. She was lured to Kugelmann in May, 1915, and for some time they "kept company" in the ordinary way. He spoke of a wealthy uncle in Lorain, Ohio, and of his own prosperity in business. On March 23 there was a party at her home, celebrating the feast of the Passover. The feast was passed around and Pauline Mink was sent to Lorain, Ohio, to get the money. She said Kugelmann, damming the front door to make her believe he had followed the other guests out when the party ended, concealed himself in another room and later attacked her.

Publicity Saved Third Girl.

Helen Keives told her story to the grand jury and her mother and sister arrived at Kugelmann's home. Since then Kugelmann has been in Tombs, and his name and address are being given to the public. Kugelmann, she said, Kugelmann told her he was about to receive $10,000 from an uncle in Lorain, Ohio, and suggested that she go there together, get married, and get the money and take a honeymoon trip. The girl said her eyes were opened to the developments of the white slave trade.

Brooklyn Girl Told the District Attorney

Yesterday she almost got into the hands of Gustav Kugelmann, who was arrested last week on the complaint of Katherine Kaufman, formerly a pupil in Washington Irving High School. The Brooklyn girl says Kugelmann vainly tried to lure her to Lorain, Ohio, when she was 17 years old. This summer she has been singing in a Broadway chorus and on the Broadway stage she met Kugelmann.

"That's bad," she quotes Kugelmann as saying when she told him about her mother and sister. He picked up the girl and she was likely to be sorry only when she found out the story and married him. Having read of Kugelmann's arrest and hearing of the story, the Brooklyn girl went to the district attorney's office and told him the story. In Mr. Smith's office she met Katherine Kaufman, who said to her: "I thought to thank God that you were able to keep out of Kugelmann's hands."

A Chinese woman, 12 years old, was held in Jefferson Market court yesterday for examination on a charge of occupying 17 more street front for her own use. She was arrested on Sunday night by detectives who found the door locked and climbed in through a window. Another woman, arrested on a similar charge last week, Lee Shue, is held in the Florence Crittenton Mission. On information that Chinese women are being smuggled here from Canada by way of an underground railway, which has a main station in Chicago, Federal Inspector Frank H. Stone has gone to Chicago to investigate.

Inspector Stone of the immigration bureau said that in the past women had been bought in China for $50, brought to the United States regularly as wives of Chinese merchants and sold in American cities at prices ranging from $1,000 to $2,000. Whether the Mott street women now under arrest were thus marketed has not been established.
